ALBANY SCHOOLS AT FAIR.

Elaborate Educational Exhibit by New York's Capital.

The city of Albany, N. Y., will make a complete exhibit of work of her public schools, at the World's Fair.

The display has been planned to the smallest details by Charles W. Cole, superintendent of schools, and will be ready to be shipped to St. Louis in January. The exhibit will be divided into four parts. First will come the written work of all grades, from the elementary work to the highest branch taught in the High school. The work will be bound in volumes and about fifty books will be required. The second section will be a large collection of samples of drawing. This exhibit will show in proper sequence the work done by all grades, including that of High school pupils. Superintendent Cole believes that this display alone will show that educational work in Albany has reached the top notch of effectiveness.

The third section, and a most interesting one, will be that of kindergarten and manual training work. As it would be practically impossible to ship the actual work of these departments on account of breakage, photographs will be taken of the work and displayed at the exposition. Fifty photographs will be required.

The last exhibit will be copies of the latest school reports and administration papers. Other papers will show how the information contained in these reports is collected.

HAD NEVER BEEN KISSED.

Neglected Ten-Year-Old Lad Could Not Remember Ever Having Received the Tender Caress.

I once made a tour of the almshouses of the state of New York, describing them exactly as they were. Every emotion that can be awakened by sorrow was felt during the trip, writes Julius Chambers in the Reader Magazine. The most pathetic incident occurred at the poorhouse of Essex county, located in the hills beyond Whallonsburg, near Lake Champlain. I should say that the trip was made at the request of a state commissioner of charities, who desired that the truth should be told.

After inspecting the wards for the aged women and insane, I walked across an open court, deep with mud, to visit the children's quarters. While there, a small, red-faced, red-headed lad attracted my notice. I patted him on the shoulder and asked his name. He gave it promptly, told me he was ten years old and that his father and mother were dead. I felt deeply touched by the child's words. Soon after I left the miserable shed in which these children were herded together and started to recross the yard. I felt a tug at my coat and found my little friend behind me. His eyes looked up into mine so pitifully that I asked:

"What can I do for you, my boy?"

"I want you to kiss me."

"Certainly; but why?"

"I never was kissed in my life!"

When I came to write that story for publication I developed its full pathos, giving the name of the fatherless and motherless lad. As a result he was adopted by a wealthy family near Saratoga; he has been well raised, given a college education and is to-day heir to a fortune.

AUTHOR'S ODD EXPERIENCE.

Emerson Hough, Who Wrote "The Mississippi Bubble," Meets Descendant of Hero of His Book.

Emerson Hough, who, by his striking characterization of John Law in "The Mississippi Bubble," has made that picturesque gentleman alive for all time, was surprised out of his usual calm by the appearance at his office door of a dignified and impressive stranger who announced himself as John Law. As soon as Mr. Hough realized that the vision before him was corporeal and not the cheating fancy of his brain, he set out the easy chair and bade the welcome guest tell him the story of his life.

John H. Law lives in Chicago and is the resident manager of a big insurance company. He had read "The Mississippi Bubble" and had called to pay his respects to the man who had given the world an honest picture of his great ancestor. Mr. Hough learned that the family on coming to this country settled first in Georgia, that one of its members was a brigadier general in the confederate army, and that after the war the Laws moved to Cincinnati where one of the brothers still lives in a country place which he calls Lauriston after the ancestral home in Scotland.

The author and the descendant revealed in the family history for hours, and when they parted to meet at dinner the next night Hough said he felt as though he had shaken hands with the hero of his romance and had looked into the face of the man who for one historic moment had seen all Europe at his feet.

FREE RECLINING CHAIR CARS.

"The Henderson Route"—Always First

The traveling public will be pleased to learn of the latest innovation in the way of comfort in travel for its patrons which is now being offered by that most popular railroad, the "Henderson Route," which road has been rightly termed the "Kentuckian's Official Route to the West and Southwest."

It has just been announced from the general office of the Louisville, Henderson & St. Louis Railway that they now have in service on their night trains between Louisville and St. Louis, Free Reclining Chair Cars, which have just been received from the shops and are a revelation in the car builder's art.

The cars are strictly up-to-date, first-class "palaces of travel" on wheels, and this is only one of the many surprises which are promised the public for the World's Fair travel by the Henderson Route.

Among other advantages offered in these highly finished cars, a few of the most important points only are mentioned:

They are solidly vestibuled and are furnished with sixty-four reclining chairs, which are upholstered in beautiful green plush, in addition to smoking and toilet rooms, the smoking rooms being finished throughout in leather. They are also fitted up with triple trucks, which feature will do away with the jerk, jar and strain incident to travel in the ordinary railway coach, and insures a smooth, comfortable ride. This should prove more than a popular feature in train service to the traveling public, and you can only suggest that in traveling you "get the Henderson Route" habit."
